

OPPS-13 2020 US Voting Irregularities

So, what really happened with the vote count on November 3rd, 2020 and the following days/weeks/months. The potential voting irregularities were laid out in a variety of reliable venues. The State Senate Meetings (linked below) are the best place to go to see those potential irregularities. The many issues were laid out in those meetings backed with signed affidavits (i.e.: they are subject to perjury and therefore jail time). The Navarro Report is another option (the state summaries are included in the Table to the right).

For the record, I will limit this discussion to the physical votes cast and leave the voting machine irregularities to the Information Technology (IT) crowd. Should they be audited? Absolutely, but those irregularities are not likely required to potentially overturn the election results.

As shown in the Washington Post, only three of these states (Arizona, Georgia and Wisconsin) based on only 42,918 votes, are needed to overturn the Presidential vote. That is 42,918 out of the 1,409,724 highlighted voting irregularities. An easy solution would have been an official non-partisan hand recount in just a few states. If the votes for Biden were all legal (or enough of them are), then he is legitimately the President. If the voting irregularities highlighted here are true (or enough of them are), then the Presidency should still be Trump's. That could have and should have been completed in November 2020. The fact that it was not and still has not been completed, suggests that the entire bureaucracy (judicial, law enforcement, legislative, etc.) has some serious corruption issues. And that is not a political statement, the corruption is on both sides of the political spectrum. The January 6th, 2021 Capital Riot does not happen, if the voter counts had been properly adjudicated (regardless of who was declared the winner). If Trump won, the right is happy (i.e.: no need for a 6 hour "insurrection" where only one unarmed female protestor gets shot and killed). And if Biden won, the left would not have a need to hold one of their mostly peaceful protests. Right? For the record, every person that entered the Capitol and committed an offense should be charged.

As should those who participated in the many mostly peaceful protests throughout most of 2020. Those mostly peaceful protests that killed around 30 people and caused billions of dollars of damage across the entire country. Any violence should be condemned, period!

2020 Voting Irregularities

Bottomline, there are problems and they should be investigated!

The Washington Post

While Democrat Joe Biden won the popular vote by more than four points and the electoral college 306 to 232, the result was much closer to flipping than that would suggest. Biden won the three decisive states — Arizona, Georgia and Wisconsin — by 0.6 percentage points or less, which was similar to Trump's 2016 victory. If you flip fewer than 43,000 votes across those three states, the electoral college is tied 269 to 269. In that case, Trump would probably have won, given that the race would be decided by one vote for each House delegation, of which Republicans control more.

Republicans came within 90,000 votes of controlling all of Washington

The number of votes to flip the result was similar in the House. As the Cook Political Report's David Wasserman noted in light of Tenney's win, fewer than 32,000 votes could have flipped the five seats that Republicans would have needed to win the House majority — Illinois's 17th District, Iowa's 3rd, New Jersey's 7th, Texas's 15th and Virginia's 7th.

While incumbent David Perdue (R-Ga.) lost the closest Senate race in a runoff last month with now-Sen. Jon Ossoff (D-Ga.) by about 55,000 votes, he previously came very close to avoiding the runoff altogether. On Election Day, he took 49.7 percent of the vote — fewer than 14,000 votes from winning the race outright. That would have foreclosed any chance Democrats had at winning the Senate.

So, 43,000 votes for president, 32,000 votes for the House and 14,000 votes for the Senate. Shifts of 0.6 percent for president, 2.2 percent for the House, and 0.3 percent for the Senate.

For those that are calling out Senators like Cruz and Hawley for requesting a commission to review voting irregularities, they need to get off their political high horse. The Democrats spent 4 years (and are still) disputing the 2016 results. Trying to impeach Trump after he has already stepped down is ridiculous. And using incitement as the rationale is laughable after the 5-year verbal diarrhea from the Democrats and their lap dogs (the media, academia, Hollywood, etc.).

Put together a real bipartisan election review commission that will look at the ballots and voting machines objectively, implement real, effective voter reform and start healing the country!
